

Dr. Daniel Franklin

Executive Editor & Business Affairs Editor
The Economist

Editor, The World in
Speaker on Global Business Affairs, CSR and Media

Professional Experience; Commentator on business, economic and political change

- Daniel Franklin has 23 years' experience observing, analysing and forecasting global economies
- A member of The Economist's top editorial team and responsible for the 'back-end' of The Economist as Business Affairs Editor. He was also Editor-in-Chief of economist.com until May 2010.
- He exercises editorial integrity and intellectual leadership across The Economist Group businesses.
- He chairs and leads top-level discussion at various Economist Conferences' Roundtables globally.

Published papers - an authority on global economics and risk analysis

- The World In; editor of this annual publication since 2003 (published by The Economist).
- Contributes to The Economist and numerous EIU reports.
- Featured regularly on radio and television: e.g. BBC, National Public Radio, CSPAN and CNN.

Sample topics and assignments

- Daniel Franklin delivers speeches at major business conferences also briefs groups of senior executives. Some of his topics include;
 - The World in 2011: a strategic view of the environment in which businesses will compete.
 - Just Good Business: how companies strive to do well by doing good.
 - Always On: the changing role of media and what it means for business.
- Daniel presents to Board members at their headquarters, regional management teams planning and strategy sessions and regularly invited to be a special pre-dinner guest speaker at a client event.
- Daniel also speaks at large business forums and is an expert moderator for on-stage debates.

Daniel Franklin - Personal information

- Over 25 years of journalist and editorial leadership at The Economist in senior roles.
- Was with the Economist Intelligence Unit as Editorial Director from 1997-2005.
- He was previously Europe Editor, Britain Editor and the Washington Bureau Chief.
- Holds a Masters degree in modern languages from Oxford University and a doctorate in East European trade from the University of Aston.